BIOGRAPHIES

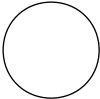

PATRICK O'DEA

Patrick O'Dea was born in Clare, grew up outside of London, and now lives in Roscommon. He's recognized as a modern-day Irish dancing master because of his encyclopedic knowledge of traditional steps and his unbroken lineage to the dance masters of the 1700s.

TWIN CITIES CEILI BAND

Based in the St. Paul & Minneapolis metropolitan region of Minnesota, the Twin Cities Céilí Band (TCCB) provides traditional Irish céilí [KAY-lee] music for all manners of Irish dance: step, set, sean-nós, and céilí. Live traditional music, played by musicians who are in touch with the Irish music tradition, invites people to tap their feet, clap their hands, and get up and dance. Live music for dancers is a conversation between the dancers and the musicians. The Twin Cities Céilí Band strives to be part of that conversation by playing for local céilí dances, set dances, and pretty much for anyone willing to dance.

THE CAPITOL CEILI BAND

Bryan Whiting and Alan Ng have not only been polishing their flute/fiddle duet for more than ten years, they are also longtime set dancers who love the thrill of great dance music driving great dancers. Music professor Chelcy Bowles has been conjuring imaginative rhythm and harmony for these blokes for even longer.

FOOD

All that dancing is sure to whip up an appetite, but we've got you covered. A buffet lunch will be provided during the Saturday workshop, and a brunch will be provided to start us off on Sunday. Advance registration is required for meals. We cannot guarantee a seat for late registrants.
